AN INVITATION FOR NEW PERSPECTIVES ON POSITIVE CHANGE

February 2005

The Humanity Initiative's mission, encouraging people to understand this planet as our common home, has become increasingly crucial as the world enters 2005. We believe our unique perspective and independence and the consequent "purity" of our web site – without religious, commercial or political overlay – offer an unusual and compelling proving ground for new ideas about positive change.

Accordingly, we are inviting faculty and both graduate and undergraduate students to explore creative ideas for a positive reshaping of the world, intellectually, spiritually, practically, or philosophically. How would you stimulate people to feel, experience or consider Earth as our common home, our shared neighborhood? How would you encourage a positive change in human awareness?

You would be welcome to design a project that incorporates one or more of our current initiatives, such as our popular archive of commencement addresses or our seminar on positive change, or of course to present original ideas of your own.

The Humanity Initiative will select new projects every semester to post on our web site, giving full credit to each of the individuals involved. For further information, please call Tony Balis at (508) 693-7878 or email us at peace@humanity.org.
